What is ENACTED about?

ENACTED

The European Network of Active Civil society for Education and Diversity considers teachers as probably the most important stakeholders with an inherent deep understanding of the unique challenges posed by policies and society. In this vein we treat teachers as knowledge and resource beacons that can close the gap that impedes integration based on their local knowledge and, with the help of our project, access to existing support structures that can help scale up problems to experts.

ENACTED currently is working to finalise the database and useful tool in the form of a knowledge and networking platform that CSOs and schools can use to address the many challenges of a successful integration of NAMS in education.

NAMS in this project specifically refers to Newly Arrived Migrant Students who are in need for better inclusion, integration and progression in their new host societies.

ENACTED Stakeholders

What happened until now?

The ENACTED partners participated in an online monitoring meeting on the 7th of May where partners were presented with the collections of practices with the total amount reaching 101: 31 for Greece, 20 for Italy, 25 for Cyprus and 25 for Spain.

More than 50 % are addressed to NAMS, then to Teachers and as 3rd group we have parents. In analyzing the practice one by one project partner Stimuli will come back to each partner for asking further or deeper information/documentation in order to respect the country policy profiles to have more equal representation in the DIPIE. Then Stimuli will share a strategy for the evaluation and selection methodology for the 50 practices.

What is coming up next?

Development of the Inclusive Education Acceleration Online Platform (DIPIE). This is the most critical and innovative component of the ENACTED as all major functions regarding the project's innovative networking activities will take place through that Online Platform.
